A few nights ago, says a London paper, there was seen the unusal spectacle of a veritable negro, black as a coal, sitting in the place of nonor under the gallery, which is set apart for the peers of Eogland, when they come down to listen to the debates in the Commone' House. The appearance of this gentleman in such a place excited a good deal of attention, and it was generally thought to be a mistake to place him there. "Surely," it was said, "the gallery for strangers was good enough for a nigger, but to place him among peers was an error." But on inquiry being made, it was found that the colored gentleman bears a higher title than the proudest peer-for he is a veritable king; and not a king clogged by constitutional forms, but as despotie in his dominions as Louis Napoleon is in France-nay, more, for he is 10 pieces super.
